A Case Study of a child who learns differently*

Ben's Progress and Educational Future

Ben's journey continues with noticeable progress both at home and in school. Though his learning difference remains a lifelong aspect, with the right strategies and support, Ben is making strides in his educational journey.

School Progress

Ben's teachers have observed positive changes since implementing the recommended strategies. With closer proximity to the board, extended time for instructions, and multisensory teaching approaches, Ben's engagement and understanding in class have notably improved. Teachers have noticed better participation and an increasing willingness to tackle tasks.

At Home

Ben's parents have implemented a structured study routine so that Ben can feel more organised. As a result he is growing more confident in managing his homework. With a structure in place his parents have noticed he is taking a more positive approach to his learning and is showing greater motivation and less frustration with tasks.
